Good day to my friends and colleagues. I have a first year graduate student who is extremely interested in the multicultural psychology field; consequently, he wants to conduct his thesis research in the area. The other day he posed an interesting question that I thought some of you could help us work through. Here’s his question:

"Hello, I have an idea and am looking for input from someone who has more knowledge on psychology research in countries other than the United States. I am thinking of running an experiment in the U.S. that examines a psychological theory that was originated in a different country/culture. Does anyone know of an experimented theory that originated in another country that could be tested in the U.S?"

I am also interested in methods and measures that are established in different countries. Are there any methods or measures used in different countries that haven't been really tested in the U.S."

I hope some of you can assist us with his interesting problem and question.

Thank you.

Best wishes,

--Joseph

Joseph E. Trimble. PhD

Distinguished University Professor

Professor of Psychology

Western Washington University

Bellingham, WA USA

Web - http://pandoracii.wwu.edu/trimble/