The California Roundtable on Philosophy and Race announces a call for papers for its 16th annual roundtable. This roundtable brings together philosophers of race in continental and analytic traditions, and those working in related disciplines in a small and congenial setting to share their work and develop this field further. Philosophical papers are invited on any issue regarding race, ethnicity, or racism, including those that take up race in the context of another topic, such as gender, sexuality, politics, ethics, justice, culture, identity, biology, phenomenology, existentialism, psychoanalysis, metaphysics, or epistemology.

Submissions are especially encouraged from junior and senior scholars, feminist philosophers, and philosophers of color. We seek to foster a productive and intellectually stimulating environment for those working in fields concerned with philosophy and race. The Roundtable also aspires to bring together junior and senior scholars to develop and enhance constructive mentoring relationships.

Submission Deadline: May 15, 2019
Please see www.caroundtable.org for submission instructions and post programs. For questions, please contacts us at crpr2012@gmail.com.
Warm regards,

The Organizers of the CRPR

Mickaella Perina, UMass Boston
Falguni A. Sheth, Emory University