Subject: Call for papers: Qualitative Methods in Times of Uncertainty

Dear taskforce,

My colleague Gabriel Velez and I are editing a special issue of Qualitative Psychology on the theme of "Qualitative Methods in Times of Uncertainty."

This special issue aims to:

- demonstrate how qualitative methods can be adapted to study rapidly changing contexts,
- articulate best practices for integrative designs centered on qualitative logic, and
- contribute to ongoing methodological debates about rigor, generalization, and impact in qualitative research.

Together, the papers will offer conceptual, empirical, and methodological resources for psychologists conducting research in times of transformation and change.

You can read the full description of the call, here: <https://www.apa.org/pubs/journals/qua/qualitative-methods-times-uncertainty.html>

Please feel free to submit your ideas and to share the call with your colleagues.

Cheers,

Séamus
