Global Psychosocial Network

GPN is a global network of psychosocial professionals who provide support and accompaniment to other psychosocial workers, healthcare professionals, humanitarian workers, and social justice activists in conflict and disaster zones.

In multiple conflict and disaster zones across the globe, professionals and volunteers are addressing the needs of, or reporting on, traumatized populations and refugees. These human rights workers, activists, journalists, doctors, nurses, therapists, counselors, social workers, researchers, and volunteers live in the same violent contexts as the populations they serve.

Despite their efforts to help others, professionals in conflict and disaster zones often find themselves without support of their own. Sometimes, they are hesitant to seek local services for professional and/or personal reasons. At other times, adequate support is unavailable.

GPN is a network of professionals who provide psychosocial and community support to other professionals, groups, and organizations throughout the world. We focus on psychosocial support for individuals, communities, and organizations engaged in psychosocial work, activism, human rights, and other humanitarian work in areas of conflict, disaster, forced or economic migration, and social and political change. Drawing on an accompaniment we seek to jointly support, witness, and advocate while aspiring towards the development of open professional communities and mutual empowerment. In doing so, our vision is to stand in solidarity with other professionals who are grappling with the challenges of working in regions beset by war and catastrophe.

To learn more, visit globalpsychosocial.org or email srkamens@gmail.com

---

Sarah Kamens, PhD
Postdoctoral Fellow in Psychology
Wesleyan University
Member-at-Large, Society for Humanistic Psychology (APA Division 32)