Join the Racial Justice Action Group (RJAG) in holding space together with students, scholars, psychologists, activists, and communities through dialogue, arts, shared practices, and collaborative circles. RJAG is organized around understanding and working to eliminate issues of racial injustice, and seeks to draw attention to the ways in which racism intersects with multiple destructive patterns of power rooted in histories of settler colonialism and ongoing coloniality. In this pre-conference workshop, RJAG intends to facilitate discussion circles of resistance that make these intersecting oppressions visible, uncover shared desires for anti-colonial worlds, and identify actionable pathways towards re-shaping relationships in ways that are marked by love and commitments to decoloniality, racial justice, and re-humanization.
